What's new:

Exclusive: Inside the Lesbian Bisexual Straight Transgendered Community » Page 3 "I have a history of rejecting the cis narrative. And that's a challenge for many of my trans sisters and brothers," said Brooke Bravo. Bravo, a transgender leader in Houston's lesbian, bisexual and transgender community, and the founder of Black TransLatinX United, created the five-day retreat in hopes of uniting trans, black and Latino LGBTQ people. The month-long retreat invites Black, Latinx, Asian and other "underrepresented" trans and LGBTQ people from various backgrounds to an all-inclusive safe space. Bravo has worked tirelessly to combat those words with words of her own: "I want people to think of me as a straight ally and allyship to the community," she said. "One of the ways to do that is this conversation around bisexuality and how people of color, and specifically Black people, relate to bisexual people." Why Bisexuality at Pride Fest for the Sake of Being a Bi Ally The image of Houston's Pride Festival is that we're progressive and forward thinking. Perhaps it's why the 2018 Houston Pride Festival is boldly making bisexuality a part of the celebration. And it's not just another small gay-straight alliance sprinkling in the
