My Girlfriend is a Gumiho)You Can Understand A Vodka Bottle In 12 Languages Vodka, may it be clear, has always been considered a very simple product. It's just the base spirit, some water, and some flavoring. There's no real yeast, there's no colorant, no sugar - just vodka and water. But that's about to change as Pernod Ricard is set to launch their "Vodka Collection," designed to educate consumers on how and where the spirit comes from. To accomplish this, the brand, which makes Absolut, decided to create a vodka label that would be understandable and "informational" in 12 different languages. Pernod Ricard enlisted the help of a creative agency, Spacelab, which led the creation of a brand-new label, in both print and digital. The project was started in 2014, but was recently completed, and the 14 new labels are now available for consumers in several markets, including the U.K. and U.S. The "Vodka Collection" label also features the logo of the London 2012 Olympics. "The 'Vodka Collection' Label is the ideal way to show consumers the passion behind vodka, and the techniques used to create it," said Bianca Cheng, SVP marketing at Pernod Ricard Vodka. "Our new label not only reveals to consumers how vodka is created, but also highlights the components of the product that make it different from other spirit types."An awesome Chevelle picture with awesome loud tones and awesome bass, this is a keeper.. the car is in great shape and it is located just for you at 3611 Woodstock Drive, Holland, MI 48825 12/2-19 calling Selling my 2006 Dodge Journey SXT.
