More particularly, the disclosure relates to a control device and a clutch device that can be used in a stage of a power transmission mechanism in which a motor acts. Background Art Conventionally, an electromagnetic clutch of a driving torque path that transmits a driving torque from an internal combustion engine to a hydraulic pump or another motor is provided in a stage of a power transmission mechanism for using the hydraulic pump or the motor. In particular, a hydraulic pump that is a driving source of a hydraulic slave cylinder that is mounted in front of a crawler type vehicle, to raise/lower a snowplow or a road roller is mounted to a work vehicle as the hydraulic pump. A clutch is disposed between an engine output shaft and a driving shaft of the hydraulic pump, and the clutch engages and disengages a motor that rotates with the engine and the hydraulic pump. In such a clutch device, an electromagnetic clutch is provided between an input shaft of the hydraulic pump and an output shaft of the engine. The electromagnetic clutch has a cylindrical rotor rotating integrally with the input shaft, a first arm and a second arm to rotate the rotor, and a permanent magnet of the rotor faces the first arm and the second arm. When a predetermined clutch engaging voltage is applied to the first
