"Mikayla is easy to talk to, she has great customer service skills, and can jump into the conversation with ease," he said. "She was very reassuring." The court heard that Mikayla, a 34-year-old pilot, punched her husband while at their home in Randwick at around 12.45am. She then stabbed herself four times in the neck, torso and arm. She told the victim: "I love you, I want to kill myself. I'm not happy. I can't stand it, I can't stand you. I don't love you, I don't even like you, I hate you." Mikayla then said to her husband: "Don't you say you love me, don't say you love me." The court heard that the victim's head was then knocked into a bench, leaving a gash on his head. When asked what happened, Mikayla said: "I was depressed and I couldn't take it anymore. I couldn't do it anymore. He will never be happy." She then said: "That day, I left my kids and myself at the door. I was going to kill myself. I hated myself, I wanted to die, I wanted to kill myself." She then told the victim that she was sorry. "She had a history of previous violent acts and was under mental health treatment at the time of the offence," Judge Jeffrey Bennett said. "Her actions are a sorry and distressing event in what otherwise was a marriage. "She was a witness to a friend's suicide, so her cruel and selfish conduct against her husband is distressing and disturbing. "The couple are joint co-owners of two businesses and have two young children. "At the time of the offending, Mr D was a recovering alcoholic and Ms D was taking anti-depressants.
