Striatal dopamine D2/D3 receptor regulation by chronic MPP+ intoxication in mice: association with dyskinesia. The neuroprotective effects of a selective dopaminergic agent, amantadine, have been proposed to be mediated through the enhancement of dopamine D2 receptors (D2R) by chronic administration in animal models of Parkinson's disease (PD). The aim of this study was to evaluate the effect of chronic administration of MPTP (1-methyl-4-phenyl-1,2,3,6-tetrahydropyridine) on striatal D2R and D3R (D2-like and D3-like) using [(3)H]-raclopride and [(3)H]-LY341495, respectively. The expression of D2R and D3R mRNA in the striatum was investigated using in situ hybridization histochemistry. Rats received chronic administration of MPTP (40mg/kg, s.c., 7 days) and were sacrificed at 24h, 2, and 7 days after the last MPTP injection. Animals that received vehicle were used as controls. A significant decrease in [(3)H]-raclopride binding was observed in MPTP-treated animals at 2 and 7 days. No significant difference was observed in the expression of D2R mRNA in the striatum, however a significant decrease in D3R mRNA levels was observed at 24h and 2 days. The decrease in D3R mRNA was accompanied by an increase in D2R mRNA in MPTP-treated animals at
