Word Every image editing program should be able to open and edit Word files. Many of the file-processing tools in GIMP can open most of the common proprietary word-processing files and export them into graphic formats. Even if you use Microsoft Word, you'll see images directly imported and embedded in the Word document itself. However, this application also has some limitations. Don't expect editing a large font table, changing the color of an entire paragraph, or saving, editing, and printing the whole document all in one step. It does have some powerful built-in features that you can manipulate, though, such as the ability to lock, shadow, and free-transform a paragraph or a whole document. * Learn more about Word at www.microsoft.com/word. * Search the Internet for additional tutorials on using Word. * Find a local user's group for help with these applications.

In addition, brushes can have a special color, similar to the Mixer Brush Tool, which allows you to sample colors from a selected area to create special effects. Some brushes include features such as Gradient Shapes, which allow you to create a line that gradually changes from one color to another. The same method can also be used to create an area that gradually becomes a gradient. Other brushes include Sprites, which are useful when creating "artistic" images. In addition, they help you create a variety of patterns and shapes on your canvas. The Smooth Spots Brush works similar to a pencil—it allows you to sample pixels from a selected area and adjust the darkness or lightness. You can also choose the direction in which you want the change to occur. Like the Mixer Brush, the Gradient Gradient tool can be used to create a Gradient Fill that looks very similar to a photograph. In addition, it's possible to apply special effects to images with the Adjustment Brush, which allows you to sample colors from a selected area and adjust the brightness or color of your image. The Poly Brush allows you to quickly and easily create patterns using circles, polygons, and other shapes. Some of the tools you can use with the Poly Brush include: Brush Edge, Fill Edge, Gradient Edge, Linear Gradient, Radial Gradient, Texture Gradient, and Tile Gradient. The Eraser Tool is a great way to clean up background noise, erase small dots, or erase very large areas of an image. It can be used on both layers and on the Background layer. Multiple Layer Brush makes it easy to create patterns that consist of one or more layers. For example, you can create shading for a character, or create a single object that blends with its background. The Reflected Gradient paints one color over another color. This is similar to the Process Color feature in Photoshop Elements. In addition, this feature can be used to paint effects and patterns onto multiple layers in the same way that the Sponge Bucket can be used to paint paint in any color or shape. The Gradient Pattern brush is similar to the gradient paint bucket but has more options. It allows you to choose the colors that you want to use and create a variety of shapes such as a rectangle, ellipse, star, or even a donut shape. The Sponge bucket is a brush that can be used to

Q: How to get response string from http server via jQuery $.ajax I have implemented a nodejs server running on ubuntu, with code similar to the example in the ExpressJS docs Using postman, i can successfully send requests to this server but it returns a javascript response. { "code": 200, "jsonpCallbackId": "u:2116880", "status": "success", "message": "OK" } The expected response would be the plain "OK" string. How do I make $.ajax send this response to the client? $.ajax({ url: url, data: { api_key: api_key, callback: callback }, dataType: 'json', success: function(data){ console.log(data); }, error: function(data){ console.log(data); } }); It's annoying that the API docs tell you to use the jsonp callback and aren't explicit that it's actually being returned as text/javascript. A: It's annoying that the API docs tell you to use the jsonp callback and aren't explicit that it's actually being returned as text/javascript. Well, it is text/javascript. :) But it's not clear in the example in the docs. By design, a JSONP call doesn't return a payload, so you cannot use $.ajax() to parse and extract it. You could use $.post() and stringify your response, and then parse it in JS: // Tell jQuery that the response data is a string dataType: 'text', $.post("", data, function(data) { var response = $.parseJSON(data); // use response }); Q: How do I set up a https equivalent for localhost with Django? I'm developing in Django, and I need to access a page on my local server from a browser. I can access it without https, but I
