Genomic structure and organization of the GAD45 gene locus on chromosome 2p23. Type II diabetes mellitus is a highly heterogeneous disease having a complex polygenic inheritance pattern. The majority of type II diabetic patients have early age onset and show insulin resistance and/or beta-cell dysfunction. Previously we reported localization of a type II diabetes mellitus susceptibility locus, IDDM1, to 2p23-p25 in a Japanese population (Behringer, M., Horikoshi, K., Nielsen, T.A., Ogawa, K., Reisman, G.A., Fox, R.E., Rubin, R.J. and Schadt, E.L. (1996) Hum. Mol. Genet. 5, 661-668). The locus showed a strong linkage association with the GAD67 and IA-2 genes and a polymorphism in a recently described IDDM2 gene. Here we present the characterization of the chromosomal region by physical mapping. The region harboured the GAD45 gene encoding the 45-kDa islet cell antigen. The GAD45 gene (formerly designated as PFP) was mapped to the region by fluorescence in situ hybridization. We identified three PFP transcripts (1.0, 1.9 and 2.7 kb in size). The larger transcripts were found in pancreatic islet, liver and brain but the shorter ones were exclusively expressed in pancreas. Both the transcripts had an open reading frame of 224 bp encoding a protein of 75 amino acids. The genomic organization of the GAD45 gene is similar to that of the cyclin D1 and phosphatase 5a genes. Analysis of meiotic recombination events in a pedigree allowed us to assign a minimal critical interval between GAD45 and IDDM1. We showed that the IDDM1 marker locus at 2p23-25 is not linked to the GAD45 gene locus. These data suggest that multiple genes may be involved in the development of type II diabetes and that IDDM1 and GAD45 are two distinct disease loci.

House passes bill to protect journalists When House members met to discuss a bill to safeguard journalists from online attacks and prosecute government surveillance of them, one member objected to the measure for not including the word “Islam” in the title. “What is going to protect the journalists is this bill,” Rep. Alan Grayson said. “We just need to make sure the title is Islam, not terrorism.” The bill, which passed 229-187, is written to protect journalists as they work to report on the Iraq war and other topics. It would crack down on the government’s ability to monitor reporters’ communications and require that the Office of the Director of National Intelligence, Central Intelligence Agency, National Security Agency, National Counterterrorism Center, Department of Homeland Security, and the FBI report to the House and Senate Intelligence and Judiciary committees on any surveillance requests they have made of journalists. However, the bill does not include the word “Islam” in the title because it would be better to target an overarching threat. “I cannot imagine anything that is more alarming to me than the proliferation of an ideology of violence, that is based on a fundamentalist interpretation of Islam, that threatens American lives and American interests,” said Rep. Mike Rogers, a Michigan Republican. The bill includes increased penalties for people convicted of intimidation of a journalist, as well as terrorism. It also includes improved reporting requirements for journalists. It has its problems, including the current requirement that journalists only be able to receive FBI surveillance warrants by “arguable probable cause,” as well as provisions about intimidation of journalists that may seem onerous to some. Rep. Donna Edwards, a Maryland Democrat, said the bill protects the First Amendment and the constitutional right to free speech. “There is no right to be free from surveillance by the American government,” she said. Dude! I sold it to Mr Pink! To be fair, the opinion of the wife is worth at least $2,500 (this won’t be a padded envelope) but there is a possibility that Mr Pink’s opinion is worth more than the value of the laptop due to his Mr Pinkness. So much for higher education? Although, he did ask me how much I paid for the laptop. So he may have bought it using his own money, which is probably worth at least a
