It is usually used between 2 locations for business meetings, between 2 individuals for family or friends activities. The technology is very fast, easy to use and it allows people to talk to each other from anywhere. Many people are very interested in videoconferencing but few of them know how to set up and configure a conference room in a network. Some people do not know how to configure this technology correctly and the costs of it can be huge. The hardware and software required in these kinds of conferences are quite expensive and not all companies can afford such things. The software cost can be as high as few hundred dollars and the audio equipment can cost a few hundred dollars in some cases. Most companies require such conferencing services during business hours, when the employees have their offices in different locations. When companies are spread across the world, videoconferencing services are a great help to employees who are not in the same location. The software is usually based on a big server that has many lines or channels available to use. People who set up the conference can connect their laptops, iPhones and desktops to this server. Videoconferencing can be performed by using a phone call, but it is a slower process and requires a lot of bandwidth. Most people would love to have video conferencing over the Internet, but they cannot get it that way because of bandwidth issues. Most people cannot afford such facilities when they work. The network administrators take care of these conferencing services. If a company does not have the servers, they rent them, use a private network or even a leased line. Some companies who have very large offices or need many employees to connect to these systems use an IP address. In this case, they need the network to be secure so they can use the same system over the Internet. The network administrator will install a software to manage these conferences. He can assign the channels of the conferencing server to employees. Some companies allow their employees to connect to a conference room from home or over a mobile phone. They need only a mobile device to connect the 6d1f23a050
