Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to an apparatus for cleaning water, and, more particularly, to an apparatus which is capable of cleaning water supplied to a water reservoir of a dishwasher. 2. Description of the Prior Art A typical domestic dishwasher is a convenient, and relatively effective, way to clean washed dishes in the home. Although most dishwashers are of limited capacity, domestic dishwashers are very versatile and can be used to clean a wide range of dishes. A typical dishwasher includes a water inlet supply, a drain outlet supply, a reservoir, one or more racks for holding dishes in the reservoir, one or more spraying devices for spraying water on the dishes, and one or more water pumps for pumping water through the spraying devices and the reservoir. A typical dishwasher also includes a sink for receiving dirty water and disposing of the same. In some cases, the water reservoir of a dishwasher is not adequately cleaned by the spraying devices. When this occurs, the reservoir supplies dirty water to the dishwasher. The dishes in the reservoir are accordingly also washed with a degree of dirt thereon. There is thus a need for an improved apparatus for cleaning the reservoir of a dishwasher.SHARE THIS ARTICLE Share Tweet Post Email Photographer: Pool/Getty Images Photographer: Pool/Getty Images Chinese authorities plan to restructure state-backed companies as part of a reorganization of capital markets aimed at containing debt risks in the nation's companies.
